JOHN SINGER SARGENT

- 136 Portrait: Private Judge I. Harman

Mr. Sargent, in painting his great picture symbolizing the part played by Great Britain and America in the Great War, has used Private Harman of this city as a model to represent the best type of the Anglo-Saxon fighter. For this purpose he made about twenty sketches in pencil and water-color, one of which, inscribed: "To Private Judge I. Harman—John S. Sargent, Somewhere in France, 9-3-18," was presented to Private Harman and by him left for safekeeping in the hands of his Captain. In the last drive of the 27th Division the Captain's baggage was looted and the sketch disappeared. Some weeks later Private Harman visited London, took lunch and dinner with Mr. Sargent, and was sketched by him again. This is the portrait which is here placed on exhibition.
